15 INITIAL INCIDENT DESCRIPTION / NARRATIVE:

{C/[REDACTED] is [REDACTED]. Sometime over the weekend, unknown suspects attempted to break into the store by smashing through a wall from next door.

The building abutting the south side of [REDACTED] and takes up the rest of the block. At one point, the property was divided into several businesses but all are now unoccupied and it is possible to walk inside from one to the other. One of the doors to the alleyway had been recently pried open and there were fresh tool marks on the door. Once the suspect(s) got inside, they knocked two holes through the adjoining wall with [REDACTED]. The first hole came out on the exterior loading dock area and did not give any access to the interior of the [REDACTED]. The second was placed about 25 feet west of the first. That hole came through at a point where the punctured adjoining wall formed a "T" with an interior wall of [REDACTED]. The result was that the suspects struck several studs and could not gain any entry. The suspects left without gaining entry.

One roll up loading dock door in the vacant property was found to be unlocked. I secured it by locking it from the inside. Another person door near where the holes had been made (not the one that had been forced to gain entry) was unsecured. The suspects had unlocked the deadbolt from the inside. A second latch would normally lock itself when the door is shut. Once the suspects had opened the door from the inside, they shoved a screw into the latch to prevent the bolt from extending and securing the door. The vacant property is scheduled for demolition in the next few months.

I noted that there were several shoe tread prints near the holes in the wall. The person leaving the prints had walked through the dust and debris from the broken cinderblock wall and left the prints behind. I photographed and fingerprinted the scene. I was unable to find any fingerprints.

[REDACTED] is concerned that this incident is related to a recent burglary at [REDACTED] outside Seattle. [REDACTED] believes that the suspect's entered by prying a door in that incident, but was not sure.
