

The National Day of Silence, sponsored by GLSEN took place at schools across the country again in April. According to GLSEN'S website, "On the National Day of Silence hundreds of thousands of students nationwide take a vow of silence to bring attention to anti-LGBT name-calling, bullying and harassment in their schools." In other words, the purpose of the day is to stand in solidarity with homosexual victims.

The illusion that the homosexual lifestyle is a normal way of living has been successfully propagated by promoting a "victim" image for homosexual persons, and by the pseudo-science alleging a 'gay' gene. The following evidence does show that homosexual persons are indeed victims -- but overwhelmingly of their own behavior, not that of others.

According to the Centers For Disease Control website as of June 12, 2010:

The number one risk factor for contracting HIV/AIDS is and always has been homosexual sex.

56,000 new cases of HIV/Aids are diagnosed each year in the US

As of 2006, there were one million people living with HIV/AIDS, up 11% from 2003

Homosexual/bisexual individuals are seven times more likely to contemplate or commit suicide

In the last decade the median age of death of homosexual men and lesbians was 42 and 45 respectively

Nearly one half of practicing homosexuals admit to 500 or more sex partners and nearly one third admit to 1,000 or more sex partners in a lifetime.

Individuals who have ever engaged in homosexual sex are prohibited from donating blood

Legislators around the country are considering banning sugar and fatty foods in schools because they fear the potential of health problems. Perhaps they should consider banning the promotion of a lifestyle that the CDC has determined actually causes HIV/AIDS. On the Day of Silence, an entire school day is set aside to ensure every young, impressionable student is exposed to homosexuality.

As parents and school board members, why are we excited about promoting this lifestyle? If any other lifestyle produced these statistics, would we be having a day to celebrate it?

The most important reason this lifestyle is such a concern is because it keeps those living the life from accepting the saving grace of Jesus Christ.

Oh, by the way, God wants His rainbow back!
